Nut is unrefined and not processed in any way, and there may be a small amount of impurities in some sediment (tiny bits of the shell, plant fibers, etc). The product will have a mild nutty odor and various natural inconsistencies in color that may include darker spots and grey streaks. It is solid at room temperature but ranges from very soft and tacky, or smooth and creamy, to grainy, or rather hard in consistency.

Common Uses: Used predominantly for skin care, Shea Butter is known for its moisturizing and emollient properties. Rich in vitamins and fatty acids, it penetrates deeply into the epidermis and leaves a smooth, satiny finish. Shea Butter can be used to make massage butters, body butters, lip balms, and as a moisturizing agent in soaps and shaving creams.

Recommended Usage:

- Lotions & Creams: 2 - 20 %
- Balms: 5 - 100 %
- Bar Soaps: 5 - 20 %
- Hair Conditioners: 1 - 10 %

Before adding natural raw butters to creams and lotions, it is recommended to temper them. Simply gently and slowly heat the butter until liquid, then let it cool completely. This will improve the texture of the final product by reducing the potential for graininess.

When it is time to make your product, while using a hand blender, create a vortex in your cream or lotion and drizzle in the melted butter until fully incorporated. For adding to soaps, the general rule of thumb is 1 tablespoon per pound. As with most raw materials, results may vary, so we strongly recommend small, lab-scale batches prior to any commercial manufacturing.

Shelf Life: This butter should be stored in a cool dark place and has a shelf-life of 1 year when stored properly.

HISTORY OF ANCIENT NUBIAN EGYPTIAN PERFUMERY

Genesis mentions that the aromatic gums and resins were carried into Ancient Egypt by Ishmaelite traders who went from Gilead with their camels, bearing spices, and balm and myrrh. Ancient Ishmaelia was then the centre of caravan routes for spices, aromatics and gums. One of the most highly prized substances was spikenard. Ishmaelite traders would carry into Egypt these fragrant aromas by way of Canaan. Both men and women of noble in Ancient Egypt considered perfumery and cosmetics essential accessories.

The Ancient Nubian Egyptian women would improve their appearance with all manners of cosmetics. It is a historical fact the women of Ancient Thebes had toilet boxes and dressing cases filled with bottles and jars containing everything thoughtful to beautify the body. Also in the British Museum in London is a beauty box of 1400 BC belonging to Queen Thuthu, which had been buried with her, it was removed from her ancient tomb at Thebes. It was reported it still contains pumice stone used to remove rough skin from her knees, elbows and also contained eye pencil of wood and ivory, which were used to apply kohl and facial herbs. Historically, Democritus who visit Ancient Egypt when Cleopatra ruled as queen, declared that the Nubian Egyptians were complete masters in the ancient art of perfumery and cosmetics. One of their great laboratories can be identified in the great Temple at Edfu on the left bank of the Nile, sixty miles south of Luxor. It was built by Ptolemy III in 237 BC and dedicated to Horus, God of the sun, who was the son of Isis and Osiris. On the old ancient walls in a room in which the aromatics were stored away from direct rays of the sun, in this room are old ancient inscriptions which reveal the way ancient perfumes and ritual oils were made, the softer ones or subtle perfumes taking up to six months to concoct and age. Again during Cleopatra's rule as queen the Ancient Nubian Egyptians became familiar with the art of floral extraction as shown on the walls at Edfu. Perfumes were distilled from flowers, and the flowers of henna or camphir. History says Cleopatra's favorite perfume was distilled from lily and henna
